

Neville Brown

Neville is Managing Director of Itica and heads up the Itica Provide service.

Neville has 20 years' experience of delivering and managing telecommunications infrastructure and service solutions to support a wide variety of business environments.

Neville has held a variety of senior roles covering design, implementation and operations of infrastructure services.

At GlaxoSmithKline Neville managed the post-merger rationalisation of multiple corporate networks covering 250 locations and 70,000 users, replacing technology, processes and supplier relationships. He also led the process which centralised the management of GSK's global internet access and introduced a new Remote Access service to support 30,000 users.

Neville also has business and IT experience from 15 years with John Lewis including a strategic review of corporate network strategy and partnering with suppliers and internal Facilities Management groups to deliver a £30million integrated, high availability network infrastructure for 23 department stores and 120 supermarkets.

Neville's assignments with Itica have included:

Network Housing Group – Led the OJEU selection process to select WAN and DR services and then managed the successful implementation of the services.

Furniture Resource Centre – Developed the IT strategy and then delivered the strategy by migrating FRC to enterprise class IT services, substantially reducing cost in the process.

artsdepot – Migrated artsdepot to the Cloud, delivering the flexibility and resilience the business needed.

FTSE 50 Group – Conducted a strategic review, sourced and implemented a global MPLS WAN, including Remote and Internet Access services.
